HOBBIT CAFE
CELEBRATING 50 YEARS!

Once known as the Hobbit Hole, our history began in January of 1972 on Shepherd Drive, which served Houstonians and travelers abroad until 2000, when we moved to Richmond Avenue and became the Hobbit Cafe. Inspired by the natural foods movement out of Austin, TX, we were an early pioneer in Houston. In the beginning, influential musicians and artists visited such as Mama Cass, Neil Young and Peter Max. The Hobbit Hole had a health food store upstairs with an in-house bakery and a health food wholesale distribution company that served six states. In Austin, our health food store was managed by two of three Whole Foods founders, one of which named the restaurant. We have hosted many lovely people over the years and today we are fortunate to have you!

 <dc:description>A 3:57 video designed for a drive-in movie theater. It starts with multiple copies of the words "It's intermission time" sliding into one another over a background made of green concentric circles. A voice over suggests service is available at the snack bar for a variety of food and beverages. The suggestion is repeated at intervals throughout the promo, interspersed with countdowns and other messages. </dc:description>
